

color management

A process that aims to control the representation of colors across a variety of output devices so that the colors that are reproduced appear consistent. Color management is based on the coordination of three processes: device calibration, device characterization, and conversion from one color space to another.