reference point

The point from which a distance is measured. By default, a reference point is always at the lower-left corner of a given rectangle.