

DeviceLink profile

A type of ICC profile that represents a one-way link or connection between two specific devices. Its input has one channel for each colorant of the source or simulation device; its output has one channel for each colorant of the destination device. It does not represent any device model and cannot be embedded into images.