

About process template groups

Process templates are organized by category, type, and group. For example:

- Output (category)
 - Final Output (type)
 - Auto Flat Output (group)

Within each type, Prinergy comes with some default groups created, although you can rename or delete these groups and create new groups as desired. You can also change the group icons.

Note: Process template groups for imposition output and final output are usually grouped by output device type, such as Trendsetter Spectrum for imposition output process templates.

Select an icon appropriate for the device type, if available.
