

characterize

To measure color patches on a printed characterization chart with a spectrophotometer to determine the average color reproduction of a particular device, and to encapsulate these measurements as a device condition. Characterizing a device condition establishes a relationship between the output colors of the device and the input values of a digital file.