tone reproduction curve

A graph showing the density of each point of the original and its corresponding density on the reproduction. Tone reproduction curves are used to correct for press-related effects such as dot gain and to control image tonality.